PERFECT DELIVERY

As part of our continuous improvement programme we have engaged the Building Research Establishment to assist in our company wide initiative called “SMARTER APPROACH”.

The “SMARTER APPROACH” addresses industry wide construction issues and perceptions and the impact these have on Sharkey. It focuses on very specific delivery challenges that face our industry and is being supported by company wide training.

These training modules have been tailored to suit Sharkey's needs by the Building Research Establishment and embrace the construction lean improvement programme.

The SMARTER APPROACH initiative is now being expanded to our supply chain partners in order that a uniform approach to our projects is adopted. At Sharkey we believe our whole team approach to the project life-cycle, from inception to completion, gives us a greater understanding of your needs.

As an example, our approach to estimating is not just a task for our estimating department. It would also involve real input from our dedicated Contracts team who will look at the project and inform estimating on value engineering and alternative ways of constructing in order that best financial value can be obtained.

Our Supply Chain manager will inform estimating on the best placed sub-contractors and suppliers whether it is a geographical or operationally led decision and here we get an efficient response from an already engaged supply chain.

Our surveying team will inform estimating on recent best costs on final accounts to ensure the supply decisions are borne out on recent projects.

Business development and senior management will liaise with the client team to ensure project interpretation is clear and advise the estimating and contracts team of any relevant matters that need to be considered and that may not readily be apparent from information available.

We recognise this process of whole team communication is pivotal to our success and we enforce it through the project life-cycle up to Perfect Delivery described earlier.
